"Trade-Marked and Advertised Goods"

If you read the magazines and newspapers you are familiar with "trade-marked" "advertised" articles. Come to us for such goods—we make a practice of stocking all worthy drug store goods as soon as they are on the market. We handle such articles because we find that goods which justify repeat orders must necessarily be trade-marked as a protection against imitations and unfair competition. The manufacturer's advertising is an insurance bond of quality. It protects you against un dependable wares.

In the drug line, more than any other, people demand a "quality guarantee." Therefore, we make a practice of selling trade-marked, advertised goods and to the manufacturer's guarantee we add ours.

If it's good we have it.
